

CAUTION

- Be sure to observe the following before and during play.
- Before children play video games, the parent or guardian must make sure of the following.

- When playing video games for extended periods, take a break once an hour to rest yourself. If you are extremely tired or lacking sleep, refrain from playing until you are completely rested.
- Keep the room bright where the game is being played and remain as far away from the television screen as possible.
- If you have ever experienced loss of awareness or muscle twitches from watching TV or other strong flashing light stimuli, be sure to consult your physician before playing. If, while playing, you experience such symptoms, or if you experience unusual physical sensations, stop playing immediately and consult your physician.
